WHAT SOLDIERS READ.

The American Library Association is asking for gifts of good recent works of fiction to supply the reading needs of our men in hospitals and demobilization camps. Every public library in the United States has been designated as a receiving station for such gifts.

The class of books most in demand by the soldiers is fiction of the adventurous-romantic type. Recent requests from hospital and camp librarians emphasize the call for books of this sort. Zane Grey is perhaps the most popular of all writers with the enlisted men, and of his books, from "Heritage of the Desert" to "The U. P. Trail" there is never a sufficient supply. The "Tarzan" stories by Edgar Rice Burroughs are fairly devoured, and Rex Beach, John Fox, Jr., and B. M. Bower, are prime favorites.

O. Henry's books are in constant demand, with scant supply. There are never enough copies of "Tom Sawyer" to meet the calls for Mark Twain's great classic of boyhood, though hundreds of copies have been bought in addition to those given by the public. Anna Katherine Green's detective stories vie with the adventurous tales of George Barr McCutcheon. Soldiers like the detective stories of Mary Roberts Rinehart, too, such as "The Man in Lower Ten" and "The Circular Staircase," as well as her later works.

Gene Stratton-Porter's stories of the Limberlost are very popular. So are the novels of Harold Bell Wright. Indeed, it may almost be said that any book that is popular with the general reading public is popular with the soldiers.

Take the book you have enjoyed to the Public Library and ask them to send it to a soldier in a hospital so that he may enjoy it too.
